Ekphrasis & Beyond: Writing Inspired by Art An Online Workshop at Rutgers' Osher Lifelong Learning Institute this Fall

Join in creative conversation with the inimitable John Singer Sargent, whose paintings it's been said read like novels. We'll use his art, his life, and the backstories of the colorful friends and acquaintances who sat for portraits as inspiration for poems, flash fiction, and mini-memoirs of our own. Class time will be provided to begin as well as share work. Both beginning and experienced writers are welcome.

Sargent, a keen observer of human nature, was known for his deft and revealing portraits of the movers and shakers of his day. They serve as a window into life during America's Gilded Age, Britain's Victorian and Edwardian Ages, and Le Belle Époque in France.
